IDEAS FOR ACTION

Easier

- Discuss the following questions with your teachers, or other adults with young children:
 - ◊ What challenges are there to secure early childhood education for your children?
 - ◊ As a parent and/or educator, what aspects of preschool education do you think are most important for children?
- Watch an episode of Sesame Street and discuss it with others. What is the episode teaching, and why is it valuable?

Medium

- If possible, find volunteer opportunities at a local preschool or childcare center. Observe how students are able to benefit from their experiences in the classroom, and learn more about the challenges of providing preschool education to as many students as possible.
- If possible, talk to experts and ask them how they think Hawaii could best expand its public preschool program, or independently research specific policy proposals on Hawaii's preschool program. The University of Hawaii's Center on the Family has a number of research projects in the areas of childhood development and preschool education (see the Additional Resources section for more information).

Hard

- Policy advocacy: research bills in the city council and state legislature related to preschool education, and write testimony in support of the bills you think are most effective.
